Candidates agree tax reform is needed, 'but ...'

By ALISON ALOISIO

Worries over a citizen petition for a statewide referendum regarding a property tax cap -- one that could cost Bethel $600,000 in tax revenue -- drove the discussion last week at an area legislative candidates' forum.

But, some incumbents said, the alternative -- getting legislators to reform the tax structure themselves, in the face of special-interest group opposition -- will be an uphill battle.

Two dozen area legislative candidates and municipal officials gathered last week in Bethel to swap ideas regarding tax issues.

Of particular concern was a petition for a referendum vote on a tax cap. The petition is fueled by voter frustration over the shift of the tax burden to local property taxpayers in recent years, as the state has cut back aid programs to local municipalities.

The proposal -- based on California's Proposition 13 -- would freeze local valuations at 1994 levels and roll back or cap local property tax rates at 10 mils. The petition seeks to place the issue on the ballot as a referendum question in November 1997.

'Legislators listen to the citizens who are bending their ear.'

State Sen. Norm Ferguson (R-Hanover)
On interest-group lobbying

Chris Lockwood, executive director of the Maine Municipal Association, also attended the Bethel meeting. He was looking for opinions regarding an MMA initiative urging the Legislature to make tax reform a priority for the next session.

Any proposal from the Legislature would then be placed on the November 1997 ballot -- and would be a preferable alternative to a vote on a tax cap, according to Lockwood.

"A tax cap would be absolutely devastating," said Lockwood. "It could close down the municipal side of the budget, and towns would still have to make more cuts. And obviously, education funding would also be hit very hard."

Madeleine Henley, Bethel town manager, agreed. "This is a catastrophe waiting to come down on municipal officials' heads," she said.

Bethel would lose between $550,000 and $600,000 in property tax revenue, Henley said -- the equivalent of most of the municipal budget that is supported by property taxes.

"What do you do when Bethel shuts its doors?" she asked.

According to MMA statistics, 43 percent of taxes collected statewide come from the property tax. If the tax cap was approved, the average Maine municipality would lose 30 percent of its property tax revenues.

An MMA survey this summer showed Mainers find the property tax the most objectionable type of tax, and favor reform. And, they said, voters should have the final say on any reform proposal.

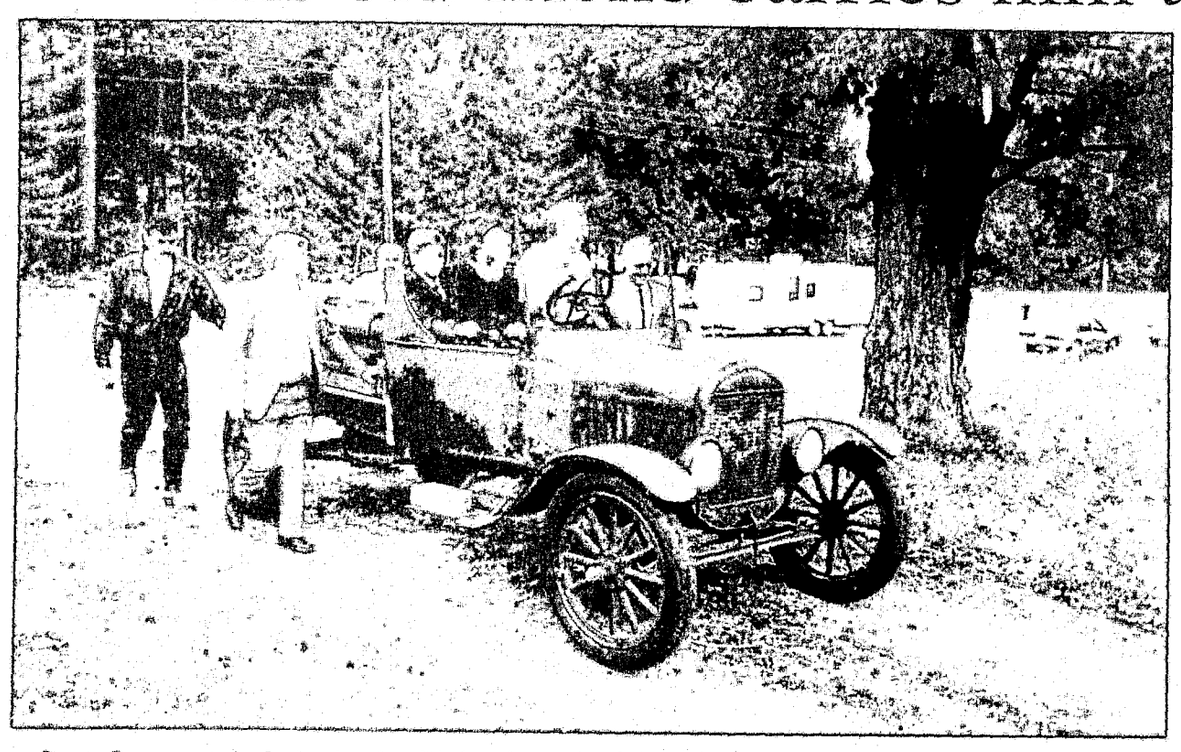
His old friend carries him to rest



THE CASKET OF BENTON SWAN, who died last week, is carried into the Mt. Will Cemetery on the back of his 1925 Model-T truck. Benton sold the truck in 1964, but in 1992 his son Jim bought it back and got it running again. Jim drives the truck here.

Route 2 motorists looked twice last Wednesday at the sight of the Model-T truck carrying Benton Swan's casket to the Mt. Will Cemetery.

But had they known the 70 years worth of ties between the man and the truck, they might scarcely have wondered at all.

A dollar an hour

Swan's father purchased the Model-T Ford truck in 1926, for $400.

"Winfield Richard had bought it brand new from Herrick Brothers in Bethel in 1925," said Benton's son Jim. "Then he traded it in 1926 for another new one, and my grandfather bought it.

"It worked all the winter of 1927 hauling gravel out of the river when they rebuilt the bridge by the (Roberts') poultry farm. They paid a dollar an hour for the truck and driver (his grandfather, Bion)."

The family also hauled hay in it on their Bethel farm. "And they hauled birch trees to the dowel mill with it," Jim said.

Benton, who was 15 when his father bought the truck, learned to drive in the Model-T. It served as the family's main form of transportation for years.

Even after the truck was taken off the road, it continued working. "They (Benton and Bion) still used it in the fields into the '40s," Jim said.

It was finally retired into storage in the barn, where Jim remembers

Mollyockett Day complaints:

Some say traditional event is deteriorating

By MICHAEL DANIELS

Is Mollyockett Day on a downhill path?

The Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce thinks so; but the Bethel Lions Club, which runs the activities on the town common, thinks other service organizations in town are jealous of Mollyockett Day's growth and success.

The BACC expressed its concerns about Mollyockett Day in a letter last month to the town selectmen.

The letter, signed by the BACC Board of Directors, noted: "Traditionally Mollyockett Day has been set aside as a celebration of family, community and heritage: a day where friends and family return to Bethel for reunions.

"In recent years we have seen smaller crowds, less family oriented activities, more out-of-town vendors with no ties to the communities and a sense of hopelessness among community nonprofits, some who no longer participate in the day.

"Members of our Board have offered to help the organizers improve the overall direction and quality of the day's events but we are met with only requests for money. Many of our member businesses have contacted us in recent years with their observations that the image of the day is deteriorating. We think it is time to act on these very real concerns."

But Lions Club president Delma McMillin sees the matter differently.

The Lions and VFW (which organizes the parade) have attempted to discuss the event with other organizations, he said, but the efforts have resulted in "little or nothing of help."

As to the charge of declining participation, he said: "I think what's behind their main complaints is the rotten weather, the wind and rain."

McMillin also claimed part of the complaining stemmed from the fact that the summer fundraisers of two other organizations -- the Rotary Club Auction and BACC Art Fair -- "just didn't do as well as they expected."

Others also dissatisfied

Copies of the BACC letter were CC'd to other town organizations, which appear to share some of the same concerns.

The Bethel Rotary Club did not sponsor its traditional Mollyockett Day food booth this year, and the club moved its annual auction day -- previously held on the Friday before Mollyockett Day -- to a weekend in June. (Hart denied the Local hiker finds AT state of mind to be 'a freeing experience'

By ALISON ALOISIO

The man spoke from beneath a five-month growth of beard and shaggy hair.

"I was waiting outside a cafeteria in Bear Mountain, New York," he said. "I smelled bad, and my hair was bedraggled. A group of tourists walked up. One guy offered me three bucks and said, 'Go get yourself something to eat.'"

The words of a man down on his luck?

No. Just those of an Appalachian Trail hiker, mistaken for a homeless man after four months on the trail.

On Oct. 1 that hiker -- Mike Poirier of East Bethel -- reached the top of Mt. Katahdin, completing his five-month hike of the 2,160 mile length of the trail.

Why not hike?

Poirier's decision to tackle the trail last spring came rather suddenly, even though the desire has been there for years.

"When I was 15, I was hiking in Grafton Notch," said Poirier, a Rumford native. "I met some guys from Georgia headed south from Katahdin. From that moment on, I was enchanted with the idea. But I figured I wouldn't get to do it until I was retired -- and through being responsible."

But that changed in late March, when he was skiing with a friend at Sunday River.

"The top of Jordan Bowl overlooks the Mahoosucs. I said I had always wanted to do the trail. My friend said, 'Why don't you?' I thought about the reasons why I hadn't, and they weren't really valid," he said.

He prepared for the trip in four weeks, with the help and support of his wife, Caro, and their sons Jason, 16, and Eliot, 10. He arranged to take the time off from his job as a physician's assistant at the Bethel Area Health Center.

Poirier flew to Atlanta to start his solo hike from Springer Mountain, Ga. on May 1.

His early days of being an Appalachian Trail through-hiker took some getting used to.

"I hadn't done any training, so I was physically sore, and I had blisters. But the biggest thing was adjusting to being away from my family," he said.

Not long into the trip, he met two brothers from Georgia, Henry and Jeremy Hilderbrand, who were also through-hiking. He ended up hiking about 1,500 miles with them.

"We had compatible hiking styles," he said. Although the men were younger and covered territory more quickly, Poirier usually caught up with them at night.

2B

To the Editor:

Children learn the very basics of how to deal with each other at a very young age. Compromise, work together, and, put yourself in the other persons' shoes are lessons we've all heard. With these values in mind, I don't think it's very difficult to decide yes on 2B is the sensible alternative.

The Forest Practices Act of 1991 gave Maine some of the most strict forest laws in the nation. Environmental groups have consistently tried to get even more regulations, only to be shot down by the Legislature. This is when 58,000 people signed a petition believing they were stopping only the practice of clearcutting, (many didn't realize how restrictive the "new" logging standards were). When the Green Party came up with their extreme forestry question 2A, it was like asking for three pieces of pie when they only needed one.

A vote for 2C would only prolong the cries for something to be done to improve our forests. Supporters of 2C argue private property rights would be violated through forest audits. The audits are voluntary, and only apply to landowners of 100,000 acres or more, once every five years. A vote for none of the above will ensure further petitions, debates, and pleas for something to improve the forests of Maine.

Between doing too much and not doing anything is a compromise supported by large and small land owners, sportsmen, environmental groups and industry. The Compact for Maine's Forests considers, wildlife habitat, the health of the forest and clearcutting without damaging our economy. Let's all just get along. Let's find a balance. Balance is in the middle. Choose 2B.

MHS VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

To the Editor:

Each winter Maine Handicapped Skiing (MHS) volunteers teach cross country and downhill skiing and snowboarding to children and adults with physical disabilities. This program is provided at no cost to our students because more than 300 generous individuals volunteer their time to teach skiing, drive snow machines, prepare bulk mailings and raise money to support this unique nonprofit organization. Although some of our volunteers live in the Bethel area, the majority commute an hour or more to participate in the MHS volunteer program. This fall we hope to attract more local volunteers to attend training clinics and teach cross country and downhill skiing.

All potential ski instructors must be 18 years of age or older and ski at a solid intermediate level. New volunteers attend three training clinics which are offered on weekends and weekdays throughout November and December. Once the season begins, all lessons take place on weekdays from Jan. 2 to March 14, 1997.

If you love winter recreation, you won't want to let another season sneak by without volunteering your time at the MHS center at Sunday River Ski Resort or the MHS Cross Country Warming Hut at the Sunday River Inn & Cross Country Center. Call today for an application and more information about our student and volunteer programs.

The staff at MHS sends a hearty thanks to the local residents who volunteered at MHS during the 1995-96 season: Louisa Abarno, Nancy Babcock, Andy Barlow, Al Barth, Paul Beaton, Monika Burk, Rosalyn Burnhardt, Rick Churchill, Bill and Meg Cousins, Ann Convey, John Courtney, Neil Donovan, Huguette Davis, Eben Freeman, Kate Graham, Herb and Ruth Kittredge, Werner Kohlmeyer, Jane Langlois, Diane Leighton, Gloria Lewis, Mona Lowe, Dick Moore, Peter Murphy, Bob O'Neil, Dave Ouellette, Diane Paaso, Lynn Palmer, Kristin Powell, Bruce Powell, Charlie Reiss, Ken and Lois Ruff, Murad Sayen, Lucia Schwarz, Dan Smith, Barbara Testani, Mike Thurston, Kathy Trefethen, Lauretta Varo and Nancy Willard.

TELSTAR TRACK THANKS

To the Editor:

Because of vandalism to the equipment that was to grade the field that the Telstar Track Boosters are working on and the rain last Saturday night, we have stopped work on the field until next spring. The field has been seeded and hayed to protect it for the winter.

The Telstar Boosters would like to thank the following people for their donation of bales of hay for the field: Arlan Jodrey, Sonny Hastings and David Lowell. We would also like to thank Larry Coffin and Tim Korhonen for helping with seeding and haying the field. Your help is greatly appreciated.

CRIME WATCH MEETING--"If you've got a telephone and can see and hear, you've got a crime watch," said Capt. James Miclon of the Oxford County Sheriff's Department, at last week's informational meeting on the possibility of establishing a formal crime watch program in Bethel. The meeting was called in response to a recent increase in incidents of unruly, sometimes criminal, behavior by juveniles and young adults in the village. That problem seems to have abated in recent weeks, and fewer than 20 people, most of them town officials, turned out for the last week's meeting. Miclon and Bethel Police Chief Dale Bellman described the structure of a Neighborhood Crime Watch Program. The residents present agreed to hold a follow-up meeting next month, to include Oxford County Assistant District Attorney Norman Croteau, who will discuss the legal ramifications of such a program. Bellman said that crime watch posters (on table) will be put up in town, regardless of whether residents decide to go ahead with a formal program. (Photo by Michael Daniels)

NO TO NOVA BUILDING

To the Editor:

I have absorbed much information over the past few months, pro and con, about taxes and a new NOVA building. Most of it centers around kids, their education and their future. I find it reprehensible to have a NOVA board member get up to tell how both she and her husband work and don't have time to care for their child. NOVA does it for them, and that is such a wonderful thing. I listened as two SAD43 teachers made statements, "If the elderly cannot afford to pay the taxes on their homes, they should sell and move into a home for the elderly." Has this become the standard of thinking, pay taxes to support everyone's kids, but if we can't, then fester away and die in an old-folks home?

It is no wonder that these people want a few NOVA buildings to babysit their kids and to have all the social and welfare programs added. A couple that works, earning an average of $40,000 to $80,000 per year certainly has the financial means to bring up their own kids, and not expect those who are not so well off to do it for them.

So, I conclude, with this modern thinking, we are not teaching our children the world does not owe them a living and they are better off to stay in school for a good education to support themselves, and not expect free handouts all their lives!

If the state supports the new NOVA building, then they should pay for the ENTIRE COST and all future social and welfare cost associated, just like Connecticut and other states do.

A vote against the NOVA building will mean a better education in all our districts at a lesser expense. Vote NO so we can send the message that money does not grow on trees and the saps that have been blackmailed into paying others' bills are drying up!

Loggers' interests are lost

By MITCH LANSKY

Something is missing in the debate over sustainable forest practices. Environmental groups make demands, industry representatives make promises and government officials make assurances that forestry will improve. But they are not the ones who cut the trees. Loggers do, and their needs have not always been considered.

Improved forest management requires better stocking of higher quality trees and less stand damage. But for many loggers this could mean less money, even though it takes more skill. Since loggers earn, on average, half the wage of paper-mill workers, this hardly seems fair.

Improved management can lead to decreased income for loggers because, in general, loggers are paid for the quantity of wood removed, not the quality of the forest left. If loggers have to take more time to cut carefully, they will make less money.

The current logging system in Maine is geared more toward minimizing short-term cost than maximizing long-term benefits. To reduce costs for wood, for example, industrial landowners hire loggers as contractors rather than employees. This saves landowners from paying insurance, benefits and workers compensation.

To further reduce costs, most logging is done with minimal forest supervision. Loggers are told to remove all trees (depending on the species) above a certain diameter and sometimes they are told to leave a minimum stocking. These are more logging rules rather than management methods and do not usually maximize quality or productivity of the forest.

The current system is neither good for the forest, nor the logger. When loggers are paid by the cord, they have an incentive to high grade (cut the best and leave the rest) and ignore stand damage. They are pressured to cut corners to save time. This often results in cutting arms and legs as well. Accident rates for loggers have been unacceptably high, leading to high workers' compensation rates.

Because contractors pay a percentage of wages for workers' compensation insurance, they sometimes cheat their employees to cut insurance costs. They overpay for equipment and transportation, but underpay for wages. The logger may get the same weekly paycheck, but he loses when he tries to collect social security, workers' compensation or unemployment.

Contractors also avoid labor by mechanizing. Mechanization eliminated nearly half the full-time logging jobs in Maine from 1984 to 1994. Spending more on equipment and less on workers means more money leaving local communities. The work may be safer for the remaining loggers, but it is debatable if feller bunchers, grapple skidders or delimbers have been safer for the forest.

Logging has become a low-status job in Maine. Woodcutters commute hours from home, sometimes staying away for days at a time. They work in extremes of heat and cold, in deep snow and through clouds of biting black flies. They have a dangerous job that requires knowledge of the woods, of machinery, and of silviculture. It is a job with few benefits and an uncertain future.

One Canadian logger in Maine summarized the situation to the Bangor Daily News a few years ago, "People always believed that wood choppers aren't very intelligent. Well, I've been intelligent enough to make sure that none of my seven children make a living chopping wood."

Keeping logger wages low is penny wise and dollar foolish. Training and compensating loggers to better manage the forest will have long-term benefits on the forest and society. If we continue to undervalue the wood and labor that go into finished wood products, the forest and the people who work in it will suffer. Better forest management is not going to happen simply because people demand it. Someone has to pay for it. It is time we figured out how best to do that.

Tax rate drops

BETHEL--The Bethel tax rate for FY 1997 has been set at $14.65 per thousand dollars of assessed valuation. That represents a 10 cent drop from the previous rate of $14.75 -- which had held steady since FY 1992. The decline was attributable to a combination of factors, including a steady school assessment, a slight decline in the municipal budget, and $5 million in new valuation. Other than the addition of the Casablanca Cinema ($772.400), the new valuation came largely in the form of residential construction, according to Town Manager Madeleine Henley.

Court backs Appeals Board's decision

GREENWOOD--An Oxford County Superior Court justice has denied an appeal by a Greenwood couple, Carlton and Lenona Cole, who had sought to have the court overturn a decision of the Greenwood Appeals Board denying them a variance to build on a narrow piece of property between the Greenwood Road and Twitchell Pond. In July 1995, the board had determined that a septic system could be installed on the property without the need for a variance, and that the property could then support a seasonal trailer, which would in turn yield "a reasonable return." The Coles, represented by attorney Dana Hanley of Norway, sought to have that decision overturned, but Justice Stephen Perkins ruled "this court is unable to find that the Greenwood Board of Appeals either 'abused its discretion, committed an error of law, or made findings not supported by substantial evidence in the record.'"

NOVA expansion hearing scheduled

BETHEL--A public hearing regarding NOVA's proposed expansion at Mountain Valley High School will take place Oct. 23 at 7 p.m. at Telstar High School. A referendum vote on the issue is scheduled for election day, Nov. 5. The building expansion would allow NOVA vocational programs to operate under one roof, rather than in several leased or borrowed locations in Mexico and Rumford. NOVA would also be able to offer six new programs, including child care, child development, hospitality, instruction in culinary arts, automotive and heavy equipment mechanics and expansion of its adult vocational curriculum. The building expansion is opposed by some taxpayers. An alternate plan, proposed by a taxpayer group, would open public schools for NOVA programs in the summer, with the students pursuing a regular high school curriculum during the school year.

Wind too much for Songo Pond canoe

ALBANY--Two people were tossed into the chilly waters of Songo Pond Monday afternoon when high winds capsized their canoe. An unidentified woman was able to swim to shore. The other canoeist, Geoffery Porter, 34, of New York City, held onto the canoe. Another man attempted to go out in a rowboat to help Porter, but found the wind too strong to either reach the canoe or get back to shore. Porter was eventualy able to get to shore himself. Bob Laux of Bethel heard the report of the accident on his scanner, drove to the scene with his Boston Whaler boat, and used it to tow the man in the rowboat to shore. Bethel Rescue transported Porter to Stephens Memorial Hospital, where he was treated for hypothermia and released. Also responding to the incident were Bethel Police Chief Dale Bellman, the Bethel Fire Department, the Oxford County Sheriff's Department and the Warden Service.

Multi-age school gets another look

ANDOVER--The Andover School and Community Group will study grouping students by age, rather than grade, to save money in the face of declining enrollment. Enrollments have dropped from 134 in 1971 to 65 in 1996. A projection for the year 2003 shows a drop to 43 students. The multi-age system has been tried before. Principal David Murphy said the group is interested in studying the system for K-3 students in particular. He also said the group wants the school to stick with any change for a long enough time to allow a whole group of students to complete the process. The next meeting is Nov. 4 at 6:30 p.m. at the school.

Water district trustees, PUC to meet

ANDOVER--Andover Water District trustees are scheduled to meet with Public Utilities Commission officials tonight (Wednesday) in Lewiston, to discuss whether an agreement to locate a well on John Fox's property may yet be reached. Issues regarding land ownership have prevented an agreement to date. The district must set up a new water system to comply with Environmental Protection Agency requirements. The regular monthly meeting of district trustees will take place tomorrow night (Thursday) at 6:30 p.m. at the Town Hall. At a meeting last week, trustees resubmitted an application to the Department of Environmental Protection to clean the reservoir, after they were told their first application was incomplete. They also plan to try to obtain a generator from the town Fire Department, for use as backup to the chlorination system in the event of a power outage.

Mead reviews coming in RUMFORD--Financial analysts say Mead Corp., which is purchasing Boise Cascade, is getting the mill for a good price, according to a report in the Portland Press Herald. As a result, the company will likely not have a large debt -- good news for the 1,450 employees. The news is mixed for environmentalists. The company has done clearcutting to supply a large mill in Michigan. But in recent years they have undertaken more sensitive forest management, particularly around bodies of water. They also hired an ecological consulting company to help with management.

Call for teen AIDS info

PORTLAND--A Teen AIDS Hot Line in operation in Portland encourages teens statewide to call for AIDS information. The hot line operates Wednesday nights from 6 to 9 p.m. Teens calling during those hours may talk to other teens who have been trained to furnish information about HIV and AIDS, offer referrals to community resources and provide support. The hot line number is 1-800-851-2437.

Get stoves and chimneys inspected

AUGUSTA--The state Fire Marshal's Office is urging homeowners who burn wood to inspect their stoves and chimneys before winter weather arrives. State Fire Marshal Ladd Alcott said more Mainers may be burning wood this year due to the higher-than-normal oil prices. He said many local fire departments, building inspectors, stove shops and chimney sweeps will make the inspections. In addition to inspection, Alcott recommends residents have an adequate supply of seasoned, dry wood. Burning green wood can cause a dangerous build-up of creosote in stove pipes and chimneys, which can start an uncontrollable fire. Homeowners should also check their smoke detectors and batteries.

Study: fat children more troubled

HONOLULU, Hawaii--Research indicates that severely fat children grow up to have more emotional problems than thin children, according to the latest study on obesity presented recently. People who were obese as children aren't emotionally stable as adults, said Hawaii psychologist Dr. Linda Yamamoto. Obese people's self-esteem is usually very low since they were often victims of teasing when they were young, Yamamoto said. "Even if they lose weight later on, that self-esteem isn't there. They tend to have more psychological problems than people who gain weight when they're older," she said. Obesity is particularly prevalent among Hawaiians and part-Hawaiians, who often suffer from related health problems, such as hypertension and heart disease. That weight gain is suspected to be related to Hawaiians' changeover to a Western diet and sedentary lifestyle, some researchers said.

From the Bethel Police log:

Bi-plane stunts draw complaint

At 4:40 p.m. on Oct. 13 a complainant from Bethel Air Service reported he and others involved with the service were being harassed by a subject regarding the flights of a bi-winged stunt plane flying out of Col. Dyke Field. The subject apparently did not like the noise the plane made while conducting stunts. The complainant said the subject had called the air service on numerous occasions throughout the summer, being very impolite and profane toward whoever answered the phone. The complainant did not wish to file a harassment notice, but wanted the incident on file.

Friday, Oct. 11

At 5 p.m. a Middle Intervale Road resident reported there was a vehicle parked on his property, partially blocking the road. The complainant said he wanted to know who the subject was, but he did not want the vehicle towed. The subjects exited the woods and the officer spoke with them. They were hunters, and said they did not have permission to be where they were. The complainant did not want to press charges but advised them not to return.

Saturday, Oct. 12

At 10:45 a.m. a North Waterford resident reported that while he was traveling north on Vernon Street, a deer being chased by a coyote ran into the path of his vehicle. The vehicle struck the deer, shattering the windshield. The deer was released to the driver.

At 6:25 p.m. an East Bethel resident reported his wife had struck him on the face with an open hand, causing redness visible on the side of his face. He said she also threw two rocks -- one striking a car window, causing no damage, the other striking the top of the roof, causing minor damage. He also said she was intoxicated. He did not wish to press charges. The wife could not be located for questioning.

At 9:36 p.m. a Main Street resident reported two young male juveniles rang the door bell, and when she answered they began to swear at her. The officer located two juveniles on Main Street, chased them and caught one. The complainant was asked if she wanted to press charges. She said she did not. The juvenile was advised not to return to the property.

At 11:39 p.m. a complainant at Sud's Pub reported two subjects were intoxicated and creating a disturbance. They were asked to leave, and did. Police were advised by a second subject that the two were on Main Street fighting. Elizabeth Carney, 22, and William Carney, 28, both of Pittsburg, N.H., were subsequently arrested and charged with disorderly conduct and domestic assault.

Sunday, Oct. 13

At 9:43 a.m. a Stevens Road resident reported a bright, stationary light in the sky over the Intervale Road. Police checked the area, but there was no encounter, close or otherwise.

This report highlights points of interest from the Bethel Police Department log, but does not include all reports of police activity. To reach the Bethel Police Department, call 911 in emergency situations, 824-3437 in non-emergencies. An answering machine takes calls when an officer is not in the office.

Candidates

The income tax and sales tax currently account for 28 percent and 29 percent, respectively, of taxes collected. Lockwood said moving toward an even one-third split among the taxes would be a better balance, with the sales tax preferably picking up more of the slack.

Some local officials said the state would have to proceed carefully with any move that might reduce tax revenue from out-of-staters.

Newry collects much of its property tax revenue from out-of-state condominium owners.

"We need to consider that a lot of money comes from outside our borders," said selectman Steve Wight. "We need to find a way to still get that from outsiders, or we're doing our citizens a real disservice."

The sales tax draws revenue from out-of-staters. Donna Trundy (D-Rumford), a candidate for the District 70 representative seat, said she has spoken with voters who favor expanding the sales tax to additional non-essential items.

"People say, 'I wouldn't mind paying extra on things like snowmobiles, concerts, or movie tickets,'" she said.

'We need to consider that a lot of money comes from outside our borders.'

STEVE WIGHT
Newry selectman

Lockwood said the state currently exempts as much as it collects under the sales tax. "People are giving us lists of things that are O.K. to tax. Taxpayers have ideas," he said.

Bending legislative ears

Most of the candidates present -- including incumbents Sen. Norm Ferguson (R-Hanover), Rep. Al Barth (R-Bethel), and candidates Rick Bennett (R-Norway), Doug Lothrop Jr.(D-Rumford) and Rockie Graham (D-Newry) -- agreed tax reform should be looked at by the Legislature.

But Ferguson said it's not an easy issue to deal with, because of the efforts of special interest groups.

He said he was a member of a committee studying tax reform during the last session. But the interest groups argued they would be hurt by reform, and the committee could accomplish little.

"Legislators listen to the citizens who are bending their ear," he said.

Barth urged the municipal officials to do more lobbying of their own on issues that concern them.

"You have potentially the largest single lobby as a group. But you haven't done it -- at least not very well," he said.

Barth said municipal officials themselves have more credibility than the MMA lobbyists representing them, because the officials are closer to the issues.

He and Ferguson also advocated closer scrutiny of the expenditure side of the budget.

"We have to become more efficient," said Ferguson. "In my district, there are five or six superintendents of schools, for instance. We could look at ways to consolidate."

After the meeting Lockwood said he was pleased with the apparent consensus to take a serious look at tax reform.

"I think we got a pretty clear reading," he said.

Mollyockett

auction results this year were down significantly from years when the fundraiser was held on Mollyockett Day.)

President Dan Hart said the decisions were based on a feeling that "for-profit groups were jumping on the Mollyockett Day bandwagon and squeezing out the nonprofits."

There was also concern that the day was no longer a broad-based community celebration, Hart said, but was instead being taken over by special interests, and "anyone who can sell something."

Vicki Rackliffe, executive director of the Mahoosuc Arts Council, was also unhappy with the direction the event has been taking.

The arts council continues to sponsor a non-fundraising event on that weekend, Rackliffe said, but "I'd like to see Mollyockett Day return to a more heritage-oriented day, with events like the woodsmen's contest and perhaps storytelling."

The Bethel Area Health Center also sponsors Mollyockett Day events, such as the bed race and frog jumping contest.

Jane Hosterman, president of the BAHC board, said the changes in Mollyockett Day did not seem to have much effect on the health center's activities, because of their local nature.

But "speaking personally," she said, "I don't think Mollyockett Day is what is was. It isn't a local event anymore."

Meeting Monday

The selectmen have agreed to meet Monday with the various groups, in an attempt to help resolve their differences. (The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in the CPS cafeteria. It will be part of the selectmen's regularly scheduled meeting and is open to the public.)

McMillin said he would welcome a frank discussion of the concerns regarding Mollyockett Day, but he was skeptical about the other groups' intentions: "I don't know whether they plan to bitch and moan or do something constructive to help," he said.

Benton

playing on it as a kid.

"We'd jack it up so we could turn the wheels, and pretend we were driving," he said.

Benton kept the truck until 1964, when he needed money for a new barn roof. Then he sold it to Ernest "Red" Blake of Bethel.

Blake died in the late 1970s, and the Model-T sat in a storage building near that family's mill.

But Jim got the idea he'd like to buy it back. "I kept hinting to Bob (Red's son) in 1992 that I'd like to buy it. Finally, he agreed to sell it to me."

Benton, 81 at the time, couldn't understand why Jim wanted the truck back – at least, that's the way he acted.

"When I told him I was going to buy it back, he said, 'What do you want to do that for?' Then, when I got it, he changed. He got excited about it," Jim said.

Jim worked to get the Model-T back in running order – under the same barn roof it had helped to finance. As Jim worked, Benton sat in a chair, watching and telling stories about the truck.

"He told about how they went to Canton in it to pick up a new work horse," said Jim. "They took turns riding in the back, holding the horse so he wouldn't jump out. They didn't get home until about midnight."

When the truck finally ran again, Benton drove it back and forth on the road in front of his house.

"He had his hat on backwards, going up and down the road," said Jim. "He looked like a kid."

One more ride

Benton Swan died last week at age 85. It seemed only fitting to his family that he take his final ride on the back of the 1925 Model-T that had been so much a part of his life.

After his funeral service in Bethel Wednesday, Benton's casket rode in a traditional hearse to the former York place – the house where Benton was born – across from the Mt. Will cemetery on Route 2.

There, in the front yard, the casket was transferred to the back of the old truck, where it rode the last eighth of a mile to the family plot.

The sight of the truck climbing the rise into the cemetery drew laughter from friends and relatives assembled for the committal service – a light moment in what is usually a somber occasion.

And a private one. Why, then, did Jim and his family ask the Bethel Citizen to be on hand to take a picture of Benton Swan's final ride – thus sharing it with most of Bethel?

"Most of the people who knew him would say that would go together with him," said Jim. "He had the whole history of the area in his head."

The Swan family are direct descendents of James Swan, one of Bethel's original settlers. Generations of Swan – and western Maine – history had been handed down to Benton.

Jim's wife, Marilyn, grew up in Norway. But Benton "even knew about my family – that some of my relatives lived around here," she said. "He meant a lot to people in the area."

He was also well known to a generation of kids growing up with Jim.

"There were 14 or 15 kids living up and down the (Sunday) river," Jim said. "He was always thinking up wild games – like donut ball. He'd blow up an inner tube and they'd hit it back and forth across the yard.

"And when it was May basket time, he'd go pick up about 30 or 40 people and go hang a May basket."

What would Benton have thought, had he known his last ride had been in the Model-T truck?

Probably the same thing he thought about buying the truck back.

"He'd have said at first, 'don't bother,'" said Jim. "But then after a while, he'd have said, 'That's the way to do it.'"

Hiker

He averaged 17 miles a day, but that ranged from a low of three to a high of 28 miles.

He spent about 60 percent of the nights in shelters along the trail.

"By the end of the day, your priorities were these: get cleaned up, eat, and go to bed," Poirier said. In the beginning I kept a journal, but then I just didn't have the energy. There weren't many days you didn't walk with some part of your body letting you know it was there. But you get accustomed to it."

For most of the hike he wore shorts and a T-shirt -- the same ones, day in and day out. "I carried clean ones to wear at night," he said.

Poirier found the middle of the hike -- the time of warmest weather -- to be the most uncomfortable.

"You got up and it was already 80 in the middle states. At night I slept on my sleeping bag, because it was too hot to be in it."

But there was plenty of natural beauty along the way to help keep the mind off the discomforts of the body.

"It was the small things that really impressed me, like the mushrooms and wild flowers. Tennessee and North Carolina were just alive with thousands of kinds of flowers," Poirier said.

He also saw wildlife -- a lot of deer, rattlesnakes sunning themselves on rocks, and bear.

In Virginia, he and his companions passed within 10 feet of a black bear. They walked by slowly, admiring the animal.

"Then when we got by, we saw three cubs behind her in a tree. Fortunately we hadn't gotten between her and the cubs," he said.

Watching out for each other

Fear for their safety because of wildlife was relatively mild -- especially after hearing of the murder of two women on the trail in Virginia, late in the spring.

"If you met someone who didn't seem quite right, you wanted to move on," Poirier said.

"But I met a lot of unique and wonderful people, too. It's like a community along the trail. People watch out for each other."

He met one couple, in their 70s, who had through-hiked the trail three times since they were 60. "They had such a love of being out there. It made me believe I could do it," he said.

One unusual "hiker" he met in North Carolina was actually a runner.

"He was running the trail. His sole source of food was Power Bars -- he was sponsored by the Power Bar company. He carried a cellular phone to arrange spots to be picked up to spend the nights at motels or bed and breakfasts.

"We heard he finished in 57 days. But to me, it seemed to defeat the purpose of being out on the trail," said Poirier.

Poirier's food was mailed by his wife to prearranged post offices near the trail. He walked or hitchhiked to the post offices.

People living near the trail pick up hitchhiking hikers routinely. "They know who you are. They can smell you," Poirier said.

Hitting bottom

In July, he took a break from his journey to come home for his parents' 50th wedding anniversary. He planned to stay only a couple of days, but the days stretched to a week.

"It felt good being home," he said. "Going back was tough. That was when I hit bottom. I wasn't with anyone I knew -- the guys from Georgia had gone on ahead. And I was in Pennsylvania. There weren't any panoramic views.

"I thought a few times of getting off. But I really pushed myself for a week -- I hiked 150 miles."

After three weeks, he caught up with the Hilderbrands.

The incident outside the cafeteria in Bear Mountain, N.Y., happened while Poirier was waiting for one of his companions to make a phone call.

When the tourist offered Poirier three dollars, he thought at first it was a case of 'trail magic' -- and accepted the money.

"Non-hikers leave things for the hikers -- like cans of Coke in a stream -- along the trail. I didn't realize what the guy was doing until he was gone," said Poirier.

Coming back to reality

Finally, on Oct. 1, Poirier was joined by Caro and Eliot for the final leg up Mt. Katahdin.

"It was a special treat for them to be there. We celebrated with five or six people I hiked the last hundred miles with."

Since getting home, Poirier has again found himself in an adjustment period.

"Coming back to reality and responsibility is an adjustment. I've felt lethargic -- like I need to chill out," he said.

He's contemplating doing a marathon on Cape Cod later this month, while he's still in good shape.

"I figured if I walked 28 miles with a 50-pound pack, I can at least jog 26 miles," he said.

He plans to return to work in early November.

Poirier said the reality of his accomplishment hasn't hit him yet. But there is a particular frame of mind he cultivated along the way that he wants to hang onto.

"You stayed focused on the present. You couldn't be anywhere but in any one step," he said. "That can be a freeing experience."

JOURNEY'S END--Mike Poirier stands atop Mt. Katahdin at the conclusion of his Appalachian Trail hike.

SENIOR CITIZENS CLUB

The Bethel Senior Citizens Club met on Oct. 9 at the West Bethel Grange Hall with 76 present. President Helen Saunders presided.

Muriel Faudi reported that 14 cards were sent. Polly Davis, membership committee, said that the membership fee of $2 is acceptable anytime. The new year starts in January. Rudy Royer, fundraising, reported on finances and the secretary and treasurer reports were read.

It was voted to send donations to the Androscoggin Home Health and the Western Area on Aging as well as a sponsorship for the new bicentennial book.

The foliage trip scheduled for Oct. 16 will leave the Health Center at 7:30 a.m. A van will provide extra accommodations, so call 836-3192 for reservations. Stops will be in Lancaster, N.H., St. Johnsbury, the Lincoln Inn and Cheese Factory.

On the sick list are: Shirley Lowell, Elsie Bennett, Lois Leavitt, Helena Bartlett and Camilla Everett.

Birthdays celebrated were: Dana Brooks, Beatrice Brown, Charles Burnham, Dottie Grant, Gene Grant, Muriel Hart, Madeline Hunt, J.R. McGuiness, Florence Merrill, Rose Taylor, Opal Tylor and Bill Young. Ranald Stevens was honored for his 90th with a basket of cards and remembrances. When asked how he managed to live so long, he said, "just living a good life, and keep going."

The next meeting will be Nov. 13 at Locke Mills Legion Hall on the Gore Road. Dinner will be $6.

SKI INJURY WORKSHOP

The Sports Medicine Center of Portland, in conjunction with the Chisholm Ski Club, Rossignol Ski Company and AirCast will present a free workshop on ski injury prevention at the Mountain Valley High School auditorium on Hancock Street in Rumford.

The workshop is from 7 to 9 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 19, and will feature Dr. Linc Avery and Dr. Doug Brown speaking on a variety of interesting topics related to alpine ski training, injuries and prevention. These are some of the East's finest orthopedic ski doctors, those used by ski academies, clubs and U.S. Ski Team athletes.

Rossignol will offer equipment, door prizes and raffle items to support the Chisholm Ski Club's Junior Development programs. Refreshments will be served. This is a free event open to parents, junior ski racers, coaches and the general skiing public. For more information, contact Uel Gardner at 824-2374.

SURPRISE PARTY--Frank and Beatrice Lowell of Newry were surprised at the Locke Mills Legion Hall on Sept. 21 with a 50th Wedding Anniversary party. Joining them were their children and more than 100 friends and relatives. Friends and family came from as far away as Texas and Prince Edward Island. The Lowells were married on Feb. 5, 1947.

RUMFORD COMMUNITY CONCERT SEASON OPENS

On Thursday, Oct. 24 at 7:30 p.m., the Rumford Community Concert Association will present the musical group "Khenany" at the Muskie Auditorium.

Khenany plays Latin American rhythms including salsa, rumba, cha cha, samba, bossa nova and especially the native songs of the Andes mountains. Their music is both haunting and beautiful. Most of their songs are in Spanish, but Quechua (the language of the ancient Incan empire) and English selections are also included to produce a sound that cuts across all age, race and ethnic backgrounds, appealing to a broad audience.

Using dozens of instruments created from wood, bamboo, clay and even armadillo, Kheneny produces rhythms that have held hundreds of U.S. and Mexican audiences spellbound.

How many autumns have blazed and browned since you gathered up butternuts from the ground, or knocked them down from the tree with rocks and carried them home in a cardboard box? When the sun was warm and the nights were cold and the world was a medley of red and gold?

It's leaf-peeping time again and how wonderful it was that Ann invited her mother and me to go for a ride and view the beauty of our trees dressed in color. What glory October gives us! This morning there was music in the air, as I walked from my door to the car. Jolly minstrels, crickets and grasshoppers were singing. Usually grasshoppers cling to a blade of grass as he sings "lee-ee-zee" while crickets stands by the door and sings his love song o'er and o'er "ch-r-r-r, ch-r-r-r." He uses his wings for his mandolin, while off at a distance with greatest of ease Miss Cricket hears through the ears on her knees.

We left home at 10:30 and there wasn't a cloud in the sky. What a picturesque setting, this nestled between the hills. Not a grass blade bent, no leaf quivered, nothing disturbed the peace of ferns as the sun looked down.

Fay and I had no idea where we were going but we were sure Ann did.

Before much time had passed we were miles from home traveling roads through arches of timbered canopies. The flashing colors of autumn on every side. The farther north we went the more color there was.

We passed little towns with interesting homes and views of ponds, lakes, hills and red and gold everywhere. This surely was October's fireworks. The leaves, their chlorophyll gone, now displaying their underlying reds, yellows and oranges.

Near Rangeley we ate our lunch then exulted in the magnificent scenery of lakes and mountains.

For me, all this with the shades of autumn stirred thoughts of the past.

Next will be brown leaves scattered along the road. The subtle signs of fall will multiply. The last hurrah will arrive. The lovely colors will give up the solar fire they have been absorbing since spring. So comes the brown season, when the balance of power shifts from summer's ripeness to winter's rest. Winter, welcome or not, she intends to come and stay.

What a glorious day we had. We arrived home after a 155-mile ride to the call of the mourning dove and the whisper of wind through the leafy trees and hemlocks that whistled softly with tranquility.

Thank you Ann.

Lillian Strait is with her mother, Rena Curtis, for a visit for a few days.

Louise DiArenzo is here from Pennsylvania to visit her mother Zilpha DiArenzo.

Dot Betts was in Portsmouth on Tuesday.

Bertha Cole and her sister Florence came to see me on Tuesday.

South Woodstock . North Woodstock

by Andrea Wing

A Willing Workers meeting was held Sept. 25 at Marta Clements' home, as the weather was too cold to have it at the Union Church. Only four people attended, and it was decided to pay the next six months of insurance on the building. Polly Bean, Mione Record and Andrea Wing are going to try to go over some of the things that have been left at the church if there is another warm day this fall.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Stan Heath on their 50th wedding anniversary recently. There was a good crowd that turned out to give them good wishes.

While I was sitting at my kitchen table, something caught my eye, and two large moose were roaming about my lawn. They went down to the main road and finally crossed after cars had stopped to let them pass. What a beautiful sight.

One of the South Woodstock girls, Megan Mack, and a South Woodstock boy's picture was in the Lewiston Sun last Friday. They were at Crescent Park School for an assembly for a sing-a-long with Dillon Bustin.

Sympathy goes out to the family of Benton Swan, who passed away this week.

Richard Wing is working at the South Paris MDOT camp for a few days this week.

I've been chasing a little kitten most of this past week. Someone left one on my land. I had to run my TV all night so I could sleep as it was scared and couldn't be caught. I hope someone is someday caught for doing this to a cat or kitten, as well as to the people where they leave it. I have two large cats that hate other cats. There are animal shelters where persons can take animals.

It has been quite a nice fall, rainy today with a lot of wind making the leaves come off. They have been real pretty this year.

Quote of the week: "Keep raising the roof and people will think there's something wrong in your attic."

We've heard from Shane Billings and he is writing for his school newspaper, The Informer, at the University of Hartford.

Tony Silver has gone on a hunting trip in Pennsylvania. Joelle and Errol Silver went to help pick apples on Saturday. Joelle says that she had her school pictures taken this week.

Joelle and Errol also visited Louise on Monday and Louise and Alan Chapman went golfing at Paris Hill on Sunday.

The Telstar field hockey team is doing great. They are undefeated.

Mandy McInnis was home for a visit this past weekend.

Jason did well in his cross-country meet today.

Malcolm Billings moved an excavator to Rangeley last week and saw two moose.

Paul Barnard and Joshua, Jenna and Lindsey from Seaford, Va., arrived here last Friday evening to visit Albert and Eleanor Nelson and other relatives and to attend the Fryeburg Fair on Saturday. Also, Sharon and Nawal Traish from Belmont, Mass., were here with us over the weekend and went to the fair. We all had a good weekend and visit.

Sympathy and prayers go out to the family and friends of Jo Stanton, who died Saturday, Oct. 5. She was a long-time friend of ours.

Eddie Niemi and Charlie Pekkola were at the Nelson's camp at Wilsons Mills over the past weekend. On Monday Ed got a nice moose at about 8 a.m., the first day of hunting. Bob Millett also got a good one on the first day in that area.

Travis Fillebrown was around this area last evening selling popcorn for the Cub Scouts Pack 155. I had used the last package so was glad to see him and order more.

I heard that Ede Holt is in Stephens Memorial Hospital in Norway after having a fall. She has a broken hip.

Grace Nelson fell yesterday and was taken to the Bridgton hospital.

Wilma Taylor is back in Stephens Memorial Hospital for treatment.

Delbert McAllister helped Frances Grant do chores while she was laid up recently.

Eddie and Lois Niemi have received word from their daughter Donna that she has arrived at Santa Fe, New Mexico where she will be living and has employment.

Steve Wilson has been getting the salt sand at the shed ready for the winter months ahead.

Albert Nelson and Chet Adams have been fairly busy lately delivering wood to people of the area so they can keep warm this coming winter.

The Smiths have done a good job at the "Helen Grover House," enclosing the front porch with windows, etc. It looks different but nice.

I must go now and make a pie for the harvest supper at the church here tonight. The next supper will be the hunters supper on Thursday, Nov. 7.

Songo Pond

The windy, rainy weather this week has certainly toned down the highly colored foliage of last week.

Once again I have returned home from visiting. I spent two weeks with my brother and wife, the Leroy Hunters, in Unity on Quaker Hill Farms. One day we drove to Skowhegan to visit a school mate of mine who is living in an exclusive living center there. We played together on the high school basketball team many years ago. Another day, we spent in the Bingham area with relatives who spend winters in Florida. Another day I visited with Marguerite Scott who lives in Unity now, but was a former resident of Bethel. I also especially enjoyed the farm-fresh fruits and vegetables.

Ethel and Craig picked me up on their way home from a weekend in Bar Harbor. While at my brother's, he took us to Bryant's Stove and Music Museum in Thorndike. What a fantastic place to visit! Craig brought me up home to check on things here, then I went back to Otisfield with him. Later that day we drove to Mars Hill to visit for a couple of days with his parents. I spent the time visiting my relatives, a beautiful time to travel the interstate to "the County." The farmers were in the middle of potato harvesting, a far different procedure from the "hand picking" of years ago.

Bill Bancroft has returned home after spending several weeks receiving therapy at the Norway Convalescent Center.

Recent guests at the Wentzell cottage have been Anne Marie McCauley and Raymond Eichel from Worcester, Mass. Also, Rodney Wentzell spent a few days before returning to his home in Charleston, S.C.

Visitors have been Evelyn and Sheldon Towle of Exeter, N.H., Phyllis Dow of Norway and Alton and Norma Olson from Berlin and several friends from Bethel.

Norma and David Salway spent last Saturday with the Brandon Salways in Old Orchard Beach where Brandon is recovering slowly and painfully from spinal surgery.

The important thing about your lot in life is whether you use it for parking or building. M. Hermann.

West Paris

Joyce Lamb was recently in Bar Harbor with daughter Judy for parents weekend at College of the Atlantic. Last Saturday she attended the Northeast District Unitarian Universalist fall meeting in Rockland.

There will be a church board meeting of the First Universalist Church on Thursday, Oct. 17, at 3:30 p.m. at the church.

Monday, Oct 21 the West Paris Historical Society will meet at 6 p.m. for a potluck supper. The meeting will be followed by a talk by Peter Hammond. He'll talk about the trolley that was used between South Paris and Norway. Everyone is welcome.

I received a nice letter from Mrs. Berry in McAlisterville, Pa. in reference to the list of new books in the West Paris Library. Thanks for the letter Romona. It was nice to hear from you.

Plans are underway for a public supper to be held on Friday, Oct. 25. The supper will start at 5 p.m. at the Goodwill Hall. It is the first joint venture of the fifth-grade class at Agnes Gray School and the First Universalist Church. Both groups will be providing food and working on the supper, and the profit will be shared. The menu will have beans, casseroles, salads, biscuits, desserts, coffee and punch. Cost of the supper is $4 and $2 for those 11 and under.

Bill and Ginny Aridas returned to Holbrook, N.Y., on Tuesday. Ginny had been here for a week and a half during the Fryeburg Fair.

Much sympathy is extended to the families of Gertrude Farrar upon her death.

The winners of the Greenstock fundraiser for the past two weeks were Jane Jones of Norway, who also won once last year, and James Heath Jr. of East Bethel.

Fall is here with a vengeance, so Andy and I took a foliage drive on Tuesday. We started with going through Evans Notch, through Chatham, N.H., and into Stowe. From then on it was going which ever way the sign said that was not North Conway. We came to the conclusion that all roads in that vicinity lead to North Conway. And unless we either retraced our steps so to speak, or made it an all-day venture, which with our colds did not appeal, we had to go through North Conway in order to get home. So we bowed to the inevitable and went through and then came back over Franconia to Gorham and then home. The mountains are always beautiful, no matter the season or the fact the colors weren't as bright this year and we did enjoy seeing all the sights.

This column could be a lot longer if some of you would let me know what you've been up to. I would appreciate it.

Hello people! Is everyone getting their Halloween costume ready? Nancy at the Errol Restaurant informed me that the Halloween Party in Errol is Oct. 25 at the Town Hall from 6 to 8 p.m. Everyone is supposed to meet prior to the party for a parade starting at the Catholic Church at 5:30 p.m.

Still no word on any Upton Hunter's Supper. The Upton Trading Post's 5th Annual Big Buck Contest has 22 contestants signed up so far.

The Aron family posted a flyer for the 11th Annual Craft Fair at Crescent Park School on Saturday, Nov. 2, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Bill Smith was missing his bear dog for three days. The dog finally returned, but was injured from a bear fight. It's going to be OK. Bill said these hounds are tough and have been bred a long time to withstand attacks by bear.

Bird hunting has been successful. Floyd, Debbie and Trisha Dicey and Amberly Devine from Goffstown, N.H. visited Vi and Ray Bernier over Columbus weekend.

Did you all go moose-back riding at Mardy's house? Ha-Ha.

Andrew Richter and friend from West Southport were here to do some hiking in the Grafton Notch State Park.

Andrew asked me where Old Spec got its name. Does anyone know its origin? Please stop in or call me if you have the answer for next week's trivia.

Mo and Linda of East Sebago, thank you for the "jello treats" on Saturday, Oct. 12. You made my birthday!

Thanks for the good fun, Ed and Nancy, of Newry on Sunday, Oct. 13.

Varsity Field Hockey

Gould 2, NYA 1 (OT)

Oct. 12--Marcy LaVallee scored for Gould in the first half of this evenly matched game, but North Yarmouth Academy sent it into overtime by scoring with five minutes remaining in the game. A 10 minute-OT passed without a goal sending the teams to penalty corners to decide a winner. In the second round Caroline Riss passed to Marcy LaVallee who sunk her second goal of the day and won the game for Gould. Amanda Barrett made 10 saves in goal for the Huskies who now boast a 6-1 record.

Telstar 7, Dirigo 1

Oct. 11--Beth Howe had a hat trick and Liza Fyrberg and Sarah Richardson added two goals each in a win over Dirigo. Richarson also had two assists and Fyrberg one. Goalie Jessie Wight made four saves.

Telstar 2, Leavitt 1

Oct. 9--Liza Fyrberg scored the game-winning goal in overtime as Telstar beat Leavitt.

Gould 3, Waynflete 0

Oct. 9--Marcy LaVallee scored two goals, Meredith Mason scored one, and Katie Chapman notched one assist for Gould as the Huskies shut-out Waynflete School last Wednesday in Portland. Gould's defense limited Waynflete to only three shots on goal, none of which were taken in the second half.

Boys' Varsity Soccer

Mountain Valley 2, Telstar 0

Oct. 12--Telstar suffered its first defeat in seven games, losing to Mountain Valley. The Falcons scored twice in the first two minutes of the game and held on for the win. As of Tuesday the Rebel record stood at 8-3-1 with two games left in the regular season.

Gould 4, Waynflete 3

Oct. 9--With less than a minute remaining in regulation, Tate Lacey scored the game-winner on an assist from BJ Otten from 25 yards out to catapult the Huskies over Waynflete School. Otten was merely returning the favor; he scored on a Lacey assist earlier in the game. Jake Fisher and Dominic Arsenault also scored for Gould.

Telstar 2, Dirigo 1

Oct. 8--Cory Koch scored two goals -- one in overtime -- to give Telstar the win over Dirigo. "During the first sudden death overtime period, Jay Horne sent a long pass deep into Dirigo territory and Cory beat everyone to it and sent it into the net to end the game," said coach Bob Remington. "Jason Berry was outstanding from his stopper position, thwarting the Dirigo attack and initiating the Rebel offense." Wade Luxton had six saves in goal. The Rebels outshot Dirigo, 28-9.

Boys' J.V. Soccer

Gould 4, Waynflete 0

Oct. 9--The Huskies kept their streak alive beating Waynflete School last Wednesday. Eric Hanian earned the shut-out in goal while Carl Davis, Justin Hall, Corey Felton, and Matt Carter scored for Gould. Gould's record now stands at 6-0-1.

Boys' Reserve Soccer

Brewster 1, Gould 0

Oct. 9--Brewster Academy took revenge for a loss to Gould earlier this season with a win over the Huskies last Wednesday.

Girls' Varsity Soccer

NYA 3, Gould 1

Oct. 12--Abby Lefebvre scored for the Huskies in Saturday's loss to North Yarmouth Academy.

Waynflete 6, Gould 0

Oct. 9--Becca Fraser stopped 20 shots for Gould, but the barrage of Waynflete School shots was too much for the Huskies in Wednesday's loss to Waynflete School.

Girls' J.V. Soccer

Waynflete 4, Gould 1

Oct. 9--Fern Hickey scored a goal on an assist by Jen Allard in Gould's loss to Waynflete School at home last Wednesday.

Cross-Country Running

Hyde 38, Hyde Woodstock 41, Gould NS

Oct. 12--Gould's Leigh Woodbury won the girls' race while Chris Kitchen took second place in the boys' race. Jason Perry (12), Nick Carpenter (13), Jed Beach (20), and Alex Parker (23) rounded out the boys' scoring positions while Merissa Lombardo (9) and Jen White (16) also ran for Gould.

Oct. 8--The Telstar boys placed fifth in a field of six in a meet at Telstar. Jason Billings, Scott Lane and Dana Howe finished ninth, 18th and 20th, respectively. For the girls, Jenny Sue Howe came in 15th and Shanna Walker 19th. The squad did not score as a team.

Golf

Oct. 8--Telstar's Neil Thurlow qualified for state championship competition in a match at Natanis Golf Course.

Agnes Gray School

by Marta Clements

I said there would be classroom news this week, but I do have to slip in another date to be thinking about. This year there will not be a community Halloween party in the evening. However, many of you will be glad to know that we are going to have a parade around town, as we used to in years past.

We will also have individual classroom parties. So make note of Thursday, Oct. 31. Our parade will leave the school at 2 p.m., head towards town, go down Pioneer Street to Kingsbury Street and back to school. Children are asked not to come to school in their costumes as it is too distracting all day.

There will be ample time to get dressed before the parade. Of course, a parent or volunteer or two will be helpful. Teachers and room mothers will be planning each classroom party. Let your child's teacher know if you would like to help out. The kindergarten children will be attending school in the afternoon on that day.

This week has been National Fire Prevention Week. Frank Staley of the Norway Volunteer Fire Department and Gary Latno of the West Paris Volunteer Fire Department visited our school with their Smoke Trailer. All children in grades K-6 received instruction in what to do if their smoke alarm goes off. Each child experienced crawling through the simulated smoke room and learned several important tips about fire safety. Mr. Latno donned full gear to prepare the children and lessen their fears if they ever find themselves in a need to be rescued situation. It was an excellent program, and we all send our thanks to Mr. Staley and Mr. Latno.

The first-graders have made a spooky Halloween number chart. They are sending thanks to Megan's mom for the miniature pumpkins she donated. They are all decorated and being used for many math games.

The author of the month for the second grade is Mercer Mayer. All are enjoying "Little Critter." They will be writing their own Little Critter stories during writing class. The children are reviewing their number facts with incredible equations. They use the date as their magic number. Then they arrange that number of tiles and write the correct number sentence.

The third-graders are continuing to enjoy their Abyssinian guinea pig, and have finally settled on a name, Wiggles. They have begun their first letters to their pen pals in Hebron and are looking forward to the joint trip to Whispering Pines Mine on Oct. 25, in the morning.

The fourth-graders are learning about line graphs, bar graphs and pictographs in math. They are still involved in their science unit on electricity. They are studying and learning about symbols that represent Maine, and in reading they are enjoying a book called "Flat Stanley."

Mr. Burke's fifth-grade social studies classes are working on developing projects on places on the earth. The explorations of Christopher Columbus are being studied by writing original historical fiction. In math, the class is working on fractions.

My fifth-grade science classes are still involved in the interdependence of living things. This week we have been learning about symbiosis. We have had so much fun with our anoles and have taken excellent care of them. On Friday, those who had permission to have one to keep were entered into a drawing to see who would be able to take one home to keep. The poem of the week is about Columbus and dreaming his wild dreams. We are finishing up our reading unit, Operation Wildlife, and have taken the unit test. Skills taught in this unit focus on main idea, details and author's point of view.

I visited Mr. Koch's sixth-grade class this week to watch his class do their Daily Oral Language and Daily Oral Analogy.
